All Hands-on Deck: Managing Experts Before Trial

This session will chart a practical, defense-focused course through expert discovery—helping attendees navigate when to bring experts aboard, how to keep them on course with pretrial obligations, and how to integrate their opinions into a trial strategy that stays seaworthy from port to verdict. Our seasoned panelists will steer participants through how expert discovery fits within the broader pretrial voyage, including key disclosure requirements and the strategic integration of expert testimony into the currents of a case. Discussion topics include selecting and preparing experts, managing reporting obligations, and conducting expert depositions that not only clarify the waters but also preserve material for impeachment or for launching Daubert and Frye challenges. The panel will also explore strategic considerations unique to civil defense practice, such as timing and crafting motions to cabin or exclude expert testimony and ensuring expert opinions stay anchored to the factual record to maintain credibility with the jury. We'll dock the program with key takeaways and open the floor for a Q&A—your chance to get your bearings before returning to open waters.
